Q: Additional comments about the speaker/topic:
Participant	Date	Response
ID# 447036	11/15/2005 7:20 PM	very good speaker. Would have liked to see his book, title would be helpful, might be something I will buy
ID# 447072	11/15/2005 7:28 PM	Very much liked his relaxed speaking style.
ID# 447807	11/15/2005 10:32 PM	Loved the comic relief of the videos.
ID# 447921	11/15/2005 11:02 PM
ID# 448304	11/16/2005 3:17 AM	I liked the fact he kept his presentation short and focused more on interaction and questions.
ID# 448421	11/16/2005 8:14 AM	A soft spoken guy with a fascinating story. For such a quiet speaker, he sure gets your attention. His roaming around keeps one's eyes on him. His presentation left me hopeful and cynical. Definitely interested in reading his book. Don't think much about going to opposition websites. I would if I thought there were any balanced ones out there but I could say that about my side, whatever that is..
ID# 449340	11/16/2005 10:46 AM	I wish we had been able to discuss the "silver bullet solution" as the speaker dubbed it.
ID# 450694	11/16/2005 1:32 PM	I wish he would have talked longer. He was a wealth of information. And I was surprised by the lack of participation by the class. It seemed really "dead" last night. Don't know if as a body we are politically neutral (which I doubt), we were tired or we didn't connect with what he was conveying. On the whole, I found it valuable.

ID# 450741	11/16/2005 1:35 PM	He could have taken more time to expound on his findings and conclusions.
ID# 451192	11/16/2005 2:43 PM	the presentation was too short. The info was good and i wish that he would have expanded on his research a little more and talked more about his personal experiences.
ID# 451574	11/16/2005 4:08 PM
ID# 452417	11/16/2005 7:27 PM	very organized and prepared
ID# 453246	11/16/2005 11:42 PM	Excellent speaker. Would recommend for next year.
ID# 453932	11/17/2005 10:00 AM
ID# 453953	11/17/2005 10:09 AM
ID# 470323	11/22/2005 7:27 AM	The speaker was somewhat soft spoken, but his topic was well researched and supported by valid facts. The material was conveyed in an organized manner, although the topic was somewhat hard to digest, the speaker maintained the focus of the topic and in turn attention of the audience. The presentation lead into a very active question and answer session to ensure the topic was understood. Definitely somebody to have come back to present again.

Q: How effective was the shared discussion of politics, eGovernment, and new media?
Participant	Date	Response
ID# 447036	11/15/2005 7:20 PM	Good
ID# 447072	11/15/2005 7:28 PM	Good. I was interested to learn that both parties play in the illegal gray area of new media disinformation.
ID# 447807	11/15/2005 10:32 PM	Failry effective. Maybe more concise and current readings of e-government would be helpful for the discussions.
ID# 447921	11/15/2005 11:02 PM	The assigned group readings - especially the egovernment in Jordan one - seemed to be too theoretical. I think it's difficult to see the big picture when you are bogged down with heavy reading.
ID# 448304	11/16/2005 3:17 AM	Very effective. I learned a bunch of things about how political agencies and parties can scan credit card purchases to track my political leanings. Also interesting to note: online petitions hardly have a political impact. I will stop wasting my time on them.

ID# 448421	11/16/2005 8:14 AM	Good discussion, interesting ideas, knowledge base and who's going to pay for it. I ask myself that question all the time or who will be willing to pay for it?
ID# 449340	11/16/2005 10:46 AM	I enjoyed my group's comments but wish we had had some time to further discuss the articles in conjunction with our personal experiences of positives and negatives with the group at-large. Additionally, feeling like I am experiencing certain McCarthy era attitudes post 9/11, I would have liked to discuss the monitoring of e-politics which has been instituted.
ID# 450694	11/16/2005 1:32 PM	Better than last week. At least folks had done the reading and were prepared to lead the discussion. It was slim pickings for content in the group last week.
ID# 450741	11/16/2005 1:35 PM
ID# 451192	11/16/2005 2:43 PM
ID# 451574	11/16/2005 4:08 PM
ID# 452417	11/16/2005 7:27 PM	suddenly brings more urgency, value and importance to the same topics
ID# 453246	11/16/2005 11:42 PM	I thought Phil's presentation was excellent and our short q and a section lively. I wish he could have been around for the second half of class to help guide our discussion of eGovernments.
ID# 453932	11/17/2005 10:00 AM
ID# 453953	11/17/2005 10:09 AM
ID# 470323	11/22/2005 7:27 AM	This is a tough subject, especially for those who are not all to avid followers of politics, the topic clearly divided the class into 2 distinct sections. The shared discussion was very effective in creating "common grounds" understanding of the topic.

Q: Is there anything else you'd like me to know about tonight's class?

Participant	Date	Response
ID# 447036	11/15/2005 7:20 PM	Nope
ID# 447072	11/15/2005 7:28 PM	Can't access last week's evaluation of Lee LeFever still.
ID# 447807	11/15/2005 10:32 PM

ID# 451574	11/16/2005 4:08 PM
ID# 452417	11/16/2005 7:27 PM	discussion schedule went quite perfectly.
ID# 453246	11/16/2005 11:42 PM	Fun Class!
ID# 453932	11/17/2005 10:00 AM
ID# 453953	11/17/2005 10:09 AM
ID# 470323	11/22/2005 7:27 AM	Although some of the group discussions tend to run off on a tangent, thus not leaving enough time to cover everything, i find it very helpful in understanding the topic and its always interesting to hear how diverse people's thoughts are.
