This is a very simple robot that abstracts the behavior of a mole. Once started, this program simply propels the robot forward until the touch sensor is pressed, and then it stops.

In this final version, the mole makes a few sounds to signal starting and contact being made.